canadienne des réviseurs (EAC/ACR), the voice of Canadian editors. EAC's membership includes both in-house and freelance editors, whose work enhances the quality and readability of all forms of word-based communication.
With more than 1,600 members across the nation, EAC promotes effective communication among editors and between editors and their clients, and works to develop and maintain professional standards of editing. More

Copy Editing Study Guide

Editors' Association of Canada Certification

This is the primary resource for anyone who wants to become a Certified Copy Editor.

Inside you will find information on the certification program and testing process, a practice test and marking guidelines, and practice test results from both a successful and an unsuccessful candidate.
Whether you use this guide for independent study or in a workshop setting, you will learn more about the knowledge, skills, and judgment required to earn your Certified Copy Editor credential.

Since 2006, EAC has administered certification tests across Canada and awarded credentials in Proofreading, Copy Editing, Stylistic Editing, and Structural Editing. EAC certification credentials are now recognized by both government and industry as proof of editorial excellence. Further information about EAC Certification can be found online at www.editors.ca/certification.
